FROM NURSING DEPARTMENT

Mrs. C.N. Sosibo
Nursing Services Manager

I haven't been here for a long time, but the past few months have been hectic and I had a lot of adapting to do. Moving from Umngeni Hospital to Greytown Hospital was such a drastic change for me. Though I have worked in Greytown before, when I first came to Greytown I had my fears around the Hospital set up as a whole.

I figured that everybody had to adapt to this drastic change. I will therefore like to thank the Nursing Management and Hospital Executive Management for the support they have given me. I must say I wouldn't have made it this far if it wasn't for your support. As for all Nursing Staff; your dedication shows that you pledged to serve the community.

I would also like to welcome all our new staff to Greytown Hospital, this is our home and we hope you will also feel welcomed and warm hands of our staff members.

It is with great pleasure to me to introduce to you all our new Assistant Nursing Manager—Mrs. Dladla, who will be working on night duty.

HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGER'S DESK

MR. NP SHEZI
HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGER

My office has noted with grave concern that there are challenges experienced after retirement if a pensioner has not well prepared. Here are the challenges that we can share and come up with intervention strategies to assist.

1 FINANCIAL PROBLEMS

The purpose of pension benefits is to ensure that an employee can be financially independent after retirement. However, not all employees' pensionable years of service are sufficient to ensure a carefree old age. Besides this, the increase in pension payments does not always keep pace with inflation. Consequently, there is a large number of aged who finds themselves in a financially invidious position.

2. HOUSING PROBLEMS

It is not a problem; however, if the aged can remain in their homes and environments, problems arise when pensioners can no longer remain in their homes because of poor health or lack of funds.

3. INFORMATION CONCERNING THE LAW

Pensioners are not always familiar with the legal aspects of wills, the purchase or sale of property, the investment of gratuities and tax matters. If a considerable gratuity has been received, the pensioner can experience tax problems for which he / she should receive professional advice. The possibility exists also that he / she could lose his / her money by becoming the victim of swindlers.

4. LOSS OF STATUS

When an employee retires, he experiences a reduction not only in his / her income but also in status. The incumbent of higher positions, receives specific benefits such as motorcar and every often also a chauffeur. However, these are relinquished along with the positions and these can have definite psychological effect on the individuals concerned. It is recognized the status that an employee enjoys retires when he / she does.

5. JOB ETHICS

It is often found that an individual's entire existence revolves around his work, and the thought that there will be nothing to do after retirement is unacceptable. The feeling develops then that the individual concerned is no longer needed by society. Pensioners sometimes even take their own lives in the belief that they have nothing more to live for

6. ALCOHOLISM

Statistics concerning the incidence of alcoholism after retirement are not available yet. It is nevertheless an accepted fact that many pensioners take liquor as a result of being idle and bored after retirement. Some even become alcoholics.

7. MARITAL PROBLEMS

Married men and women who retire enter a new dimension of their married lives. A problem originates in particular when a man retires and the spouse does not work. He is no longer at work for five days a week, but is at home for seven days a week. Some married couples welcome the idea of having more time together, but others, again, find it very uncomfortable and difficult to cope with.

8. LONELINESS

Loneliness is a problem, particularly to those who are on their own after retirement. The only contact with some single employees often have is with their colleagues in the work situation. When this contact is broken by retirement, these pensioners can become lonely. Please go out there and engage yourselves in community projects, the community need your expertise.

"Please go out there and engage yourselves in community projects, the community need your expertise"

- Please ensure that your requisition is correctly completed with the correct catalogue numbers and description as per catalogue. Incomplete requisition will be returned.

- Please ensure that all requisitions are checked and signed by authorized person only.
